

INT. AIRSTREAM - DAY

SALLY WISDOM, late 20s, sits on the floor, back to a bookcase. Burner phone to her ear.

SALLY

You had nothing to do with this!

She's nobody's fool and can make something out of nothing, but right now she's on edge.

The trailer rattles as gunfire pounds the outside. The bookshelf above her head shakes. Knocks a book off the shelf, down towards her.

Sally flicks it aside, it lands cover up - The Cold Vanish. She listens to whomever's on the other end of the line.

SALLY (CONT'D)

Cat, no!

Another bullet smashes through the side window. Whizzes above her head. Slams into the eye of a MOUNTED, FULL SIZE STUFFED MARLIN that dominates the entire wall.

SALLY (CONT'D)

Not my fish!

The marlin moves from the impact. Dollar bills flutter down on the floor from behind it.

SALLY (CONT'D)

(into the phone)

Yes. Love you, too. I'm sorry.

Sally hits end as a muffled voice on the phone shouts "WAIT!"

She crawls to the door. Rises. Takes several deep breaths.

The look in her eyes changes to one that says she gives no quarter. Get accustomed to that look.

SALLY (CONT'D)

Okay! I'm coming out!

As she opens the door, the screen goes BLACK.

CHYRON OVER BLACK: before...

INT. SALLY AND KEITH'S PLACE - BEDROOM - NIGHT

Mismatched, broken furniture. Sparsely decorated. No warmth. No feeling. It's like no one cares about anything.

Sally moves around nervously. Straightens up. Pulls her phone from a back pocket.

Gives a cursory glance toward the front door to confirm she's alone as the screen lights up.

ON THE PHONE

A grid of SIX cameras from around the house, except camera two's dark, obscured.

Sally looks to a shelf, spots a Trump-Vance 2024 button. It blocks a tiny security camera. With a huff, she moves it aside and now has a clear view of the bedroom.

She taps through the rest of the views - bathroom, living room, kitchen, front and back yards.

Satisfied, she scrolls up, steps into the --

LIVING ROOM

and tidies up there, too. Looks again to the front door. It's hard to tell if she wants it to open or not.

Beelines for the --

KITCHEN

and pours herself a hefty glass of wine. Takes a healthy swig, then back to the --

LIVING ROOM

and plops down on the couch. Looks at her phone.

ON THE SCREEN

A video titled, "How to leave someone safely."

INT. SALLY AND KEITH'S PLACE - KITCHEN - DAY

Sally sits at the table, coffee in hand.

KEITH KILL, 30s, still buzzed from last night, groans as he collapses into a chair.

Working class all the way, he's a narcissist with an inferiority complex.

She rises, pours him a mug of coffee. Sits back down.

KEITH
No good morning?
(off Sally's silence)
What?

SALLY
You going to tell me where you were last night?

KEITH
I think you know better than that.
(more silence)
But if you must know, me and the boys were celebrating the inevitable.

SALLY Inevitable?

KEITH
The return of my President.

Sally lets an eye-roll slip.

KEITH (CONT'D)
Don't think I didn't see that. But I'll drop some wisdom on you. I'm so sure he's gonna win that I'm gonna let it slide.

SALLY Whatever.

She rises. He fumes.

KEITH
Make me breakfast.

Sally heads for the living room.

His coffee mug zooms by her nose. Hits the wall in front of her, smashes to bits.

Sally freezes. Hot coffee flies into her face.

KEITH (CONT'D)
Breakfast.

She ignores the pain of her quickly reddening face. Spins back to the fridge, opens it.

KEITH (CONT'D)
Wait. Fuck. Why do I get so angry?
Why? Why?

Keith rushes to her, strokes her hair.

KEITH (CONT'D)
It's just I love you so. You make me crazy.

Kisses her neck. Turns, picks up pieces of broken mug.

KEITH (CONT'D)
(to himself)
I swore I'd never be like him.
(to Sally)
It's the last time. I promise.

Sally remains frozen. She's heard this one before.

KEITH (CONT'D)
Can I make it up to you? Something fun? Just me and you?
(off Sally's tiny nod)
Cool. We'll grill later. I'm feelin' burgers.

EXT. SALLY AND KEITH'S PLACE - BACKYARD - DAY

Sally mans the grill, the marks on her face red and angry.

Keith, already two sheets to the wind, sits in a lawn chair, beer in hand.

A door opens and shuts.

GINA (O.S.)
Hey!

Keith and Sally look next door.

GINA HERBERT, 30s, their kindhearted, social media loving neighbor, wraps a sweater around herself, clutches it tightly. Holds her phone.

GINA (CONT'D)
A little chilly for this, don't you think?

Keith holds up his empty beer.

KEITH
Not when I got these. Sally?

Sally looks at Gina before she takes Keith's empty, hands him a new one.

GINA

Well, it smells wonderful. Sally...

Gina smiles a little too upbeat, holds out her phone.

GINA (CONT'D)

I just saw this TikTok recipe.
Southwest burgers.

KEITH

We're good.

GINA

I could text it to you if--

KEITH

Yeah, we're good.

GINA

Okay...

Gina locks eyes with Sally, wraps her sweater tighter.
Retreats quickly back inside.

INT. GINA'S PLACE - CONTINUOUS

Gina double checks the deadbolt. Watches Sally and Keith through the blinds, the way a person does when things feel off but they can't put their finger on it.

EXT. SALLY AND KEITH'S PLACE - BACKYARD - CONTINUOUS

Sally pulls the burgers from the grill. Heads for the door.

SALLY

I'll get these ready, then I need to run to Cat's.

KEITH

Your step-sister? You two barely talk?

SALLY

She needs help hanging pictures or something. I think.

KEITH

Normally I'd say no. But I'm capable of growth so... get more beer while you're gone.